

Do you want to know how to protect your child online?

Do you want to understand more about the dangers that your child faces whilst online?

Peter Cowley - who many of our parents will be familiar with - is our resident online safety expert. He is going to present a special Parents Online Safety Session on September 23rd at 6pm. The session will be virtual and we'll send the log in details out on the day.

With more people than ever relying on social media, learning platforms and online retail, the idea behind the session is to help advise parents of the best way to protect our children and community when online. It will touch on all the usual points you would expect - such as parental controls and what to look out for - as well as more recent developments from the world of scammers and opportunists.

Parents who have attended Peter's briefings before have always provided really positive feedback about how helpful and eye-opening these sessions are. So, we are delighted he is able to return and update us all on how to keep our children safe online.

Please click here to fill in the form if you would like to attend the virtual session and we will forward you the log in details on the day.

Many thanks,

St. Stephen's School